

I was just advised you are in the process of introducing a new low power FM radio stations which may take precedence over the existing FM translator service. We currently listen to a radio station (KLOVE) that is broadcast using a translator service that would likely be put off the air if the LPFM stations were given priority. It is the only station that we listen to for its positive and balanced programming (Christian values and Music) and news. There is no other station like it in the area. What is better yet is there are no commercials. We feel that the station is so good that we even support it financially every month. If it were replaced there are no other local stations that have this format. It would truly be devastating to the community as a whole. We already have enough classical, news, hispanic, oldies but goodies, and contemporary radio stations in the Phoenix area.
